

Do you want to be prepared for tomorrow's librarianship?

Do you want to study in a stimulating international environment?

Do you want to have your master studies financed by a European scholarship?

Then the Erasmus Mundus master program on digital librarianship – DILL – is a unique opportunity for you.

DILL is a collaborative master program between Oslo University College in Norway, Tallinn University in Estonia and Parma University in Italy offering a joint master degree.

If you enroll in the DILL master program you will get:

/Updated knowledge of digital libraries and digital librarianship, combining technical as well as social dimensions.

/A unique opportunity to study in an international group of students, with fellow students coming from all over the world.

/Training and working in a multicultural context.

/An opportunity to get a better understanding of three European cultures: Norway, Estonia and Italy.

Deadline for applications is April 15, 2010

Complete information on the content of the DILL program and application procedures can be found on the DILL website: <http://dill.hio.no/>
